WHO IS A REFUGEE

In 1951 after World War II, the United Nations drafted a convention relating to the status of refugees. Under the Refugee Convention a refugee is defined as a person who is outside of their own country, who has a fear of persecution due to his//her race, religion and nationality and is therefore unable or unwilling to return.

The countries who signed this are obliged to help individuals who are dislocated from their home countries. The countries who didn't sign the refugee convention have no legal obligation to accept people seeking asylum, though they can if they want to.

The Universal Declaration of Human Rights (UDHR) supports the right of all people to be able to seek asylum. The UDHR supports:

- Basic rights and fundamental freedoms for all human beings are recognised in every country
- Rights are inalienable and equally applicable to everyone
- Every one of us is born free and equal in dignity and rights.

UDHR is not a binding agreement as it serves as a basis for international human rights treaties, regional conventions, and domestic legislation and forms a framework for human rights.

Due to their heightened susceptibility to exploitation and mistreatment, children possess distinct entitlements. Specifically, children deserve the right to live without experiencing violence, they deserve safeguarding, and access to quality education and healthcare.

My Views

I think it's morally right to help someone in need of help and who better than the power houses of this world like China, Russia and USA.

My Questions

Why is UDHR not a binding agreement?
