The situation of gender differences in Pakistan

There are deep rooted biases against women in the culture and tradition of Pakistan. The existence of patriarchy, cultural norms, regional conflicts, son preference, and traditional notions of womanhood regarding procreation, domestic chores, and early marriage have been integrated in the society of Pakistan so strongly that anyone with different views is not tolerated.

Due to this the main right women are stripped off of is the right to education which is the foundation of a human being. Stats show that 21% of boys and 32% of girls in primary education have experienced gender-based discrimination, likewise, boys are 15% more likely to have the opportunity to go to school than girls, as boys are viewed as financial assets by their parents. It's not taken kindly even by relatives when a girl is preferred over the boy. Many parents keep trying until a boy is born which shows how much of based the Pakistani society is.

My Views

I think every human should get equal opportunity and rights regardless of gender.

My Questions

Why are men given preference over women when it comes to running a household?
